

WELCOME TO THE 2022 LEGISLATIVE SESSION!

Letter from TVW President, Renee Radcliff Sinclair

Once again, 2022 brings with it virtual sessions of the Legislature and Supreme Court reminding us that access to our state government —and the ways we work within it — will be a little different this year, but more important than ever.

We learned in 2020 and 2021 that flexibility is key. Through those years of virtual coverage, TVW adapted our workflows and systems to manage the information needs of our audience while still providing you with top-notch access to the work of your state government.

As we move into the heart of the 2022 Legislative Session, I hope you've had a few minutes to review the new resources available at TVW.org, featuring a new look and functionality reminiscent of the television applications we've all come to know in the last two years. In addition to accessing the work of your state government, spend a few moments perusing TVW's engaging produced shows Inside Olympia, The Impact, Legislative Review, Field Report, The Decision, and Washington to Washington along with our many award-winning documentaries. It's good stuff that will make you smarter about the policies addressed every day within the walls of your state government.

We look forward to continuing to be your lens into state government during this short, 60-day session and, as always, if you have thoughts about how we can serve you better, we are eager to hear from you.

2022 LEGISLATIVE SESSION OFF AND RUNNING!

Programming Highlights, by Vice President for Programming Mike Bay

Convened Monday Jan. 10. Scheduled to adjourn Thursday March 10. And TVW will cover all of it. Every floor debate. Every hearing of every legislative committee (the House has 20 committees, the Senate 15, and most meet multiple times per week). Weekly press conferences from legislative leaders, and the governor. And more. It's a crazy-busy time of year!

When the Legislature convenes, it's always a good reminder that this is why TVW was created: to give Washingtonians direct, unedited access to their state government. It's all about transparency and access. Which has been doubly important during COVID, when most meetings happen virtually rather than in person.

If you're going to follow the Washington Legislature, and TVW's coverage of it, there are a few of web pages you need to get to know:

TVW's Schedule Page will show you all our coverage on a given day: what's live right now, what's upcoming, and what's already happened.

Speaking of what's already happened, you can watch all our coverage afterward, on-demand, via our Video Archives. Maintaining an historical archive of legislative debates has always been part of TVW's mission.

The State Legislature Web Page provides detailed information on bills, legislators, committees, how to testify, and much much more. Using this website in conjunction with the tvw.org web pages listed above, will give you a complete look at any issue the Legislature is considering. You'll find links to TVW coverage on the Legislative website as well.

Comprehensive coverage of the State Legislature is nothing new for TVW. What is new, to a greater degree even than last year, is our coverage of state agencies, boards and commissions during the legislative session. Which is made possible, ironically enough, by COVID, which has pushed most meetings to virtual platforms, so TVW can cover without needing to be physically present with camera and crew. Just like our legislative coverage, links to non-legislative coverage are always available at tvw.org/schedule/.
